

MAP YOUR OWN UNIQUE SET OF SOFT SKILLS

There is hardly any other technological development that is currently changing our lives and working to such an extent as the digital transformation. Everyone on the labour market must be prepared for the changed competence requirements and supported in adapting their personal qualification profile to the innovations. Comprehensive methodological and social skills beyond technology are gaining in importance, too. These areas of competence also offer great opportunities for all those who are less technology-oriented.

First of all you need to know what you are good at and what you could work on to improve.

These are the steps to become clear about your own soft skills:

For quick starters #0

In case you already know everything about soft skills and their importance on the labor market and want to start immediately click on the mapping button and discover your unique set of soft skills.

For all others go to: Inform yourself #1

Inform yourself #1

You might not have heard about the term soft skills before. Or maybe you did but don't quite remember. Find out more about soft skills - what they are, where they can be gained and why they are important.

Check your new knowledge #2

Now that you know more about soft skills you can immediately check, whether you recognize them in different contexts. Use our games to do so.

Deepen your knowledge #3

Learn more about the YOUNique framework on future soft skills. What is behind each individual soft skill? What does it take to demonstrate them vivid, for example the soft skill "adaptability"? Make yourself familiar with some examples that illustrate how soft skills show up at work or in leisure time.

Work hard #4

Now it is your turn. Use the worksheet online or offline to get to know yourself better. Detect situations in life in which your personal set of soft skills showed up before. Please use the feedback worksheet to get external response from different people around you. Comparing their statements with your results allows you to better present yourself later when applying for a job, internship placement or other training programme.

Let employers talk #5

Know the employers' perspective. You can get some interesting insights watching the video statements that have been collected from employers and their opinion on future soft skills.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Now that you know the steps to map your unique set of soft skills, it is time to get started.
